About the Program

This program focuses on a trio of female Arab Palestinian citizens of Israel navigating life in Tel Aviv, their careers, and interpersonal relationships. Students will watch Bar Bahar (In Between) and engage in a discussion about the film and the concepts it raises with their peers. By exploring the lived experiences of the next generation of Palestinian women in Israel, their identities, and relationships, students will deepen their understanding of Arab citizens of Israel. Bar Bahar tackles difficult topics in ways that feel humorous and accessible to American Jewish audiences and beyond.

Learning Outcomes

- Foundational understanding of Arab citizens of Israel and the complexities of Jewish-Arab relations within Israel.
- Recognition of the internal diversity within Arab society in Israel and a greater understanding of how different social identifiers (language, gender, religion, ethnicity, class, etc.) overlap and complicate each other.
- Greater understanding of shared society and Jewish-Arab relations in Israel.
- Curiosity regarding Arab citizens of Israel and a desire to learn more!

Suggested Structures

The following recommendations are general suggestions that can be adapted to fits the needs of your audiences, goals, and constraints. They can be adapted for an in-person, hybrid, or remote program.

Selected Clips

If you are unable to screen the entire movie or wish to show clips as part of your program, consider pulling thematically grouped clips to discuss. This grouping of clips highlights key conversations in the film on identity, culture, and more.:

- » Salma and Laila Go Shopping (8:37-9:46)
- » Laila and Jonathan Flirt (16:55-18:59)
- » Salma Quits Her Job (19:00-20:18)
- » News Coverage of Protests (25:56-26:05)
- » Salma Applies to be a Bartender (35:45-36-39)

Hybrid and Remote Format:

1. Distribute the Movie Guide and Exploring the Topics of Arab Citizens and Jewish-Arab Relations in Israel before participants watch the film. Ensure participants watch the film ahead of the discussion, independently or in small groups.
2. Schedule a time for an in-person, remote, or hybrid film discussion.
3. When starting the program, remind the group of important information about the program and guidelines for constructive conversations (see below).
4. Ask the first question in the Movie Guide to the full group to begin generating ideas.
5. If size allows, split participants into small groups to continue the discussion. They can use the Movie Guide's discussion questions to steer their conversations. Each group should designate a "recorder" to take notes and a "reporter" to summarize the recorder's notes after the small group discussion.
6. Conclusion: If participants were split into small groups, have each "reporter" briefly summarize their discussion using the "recorder's" notes. If you remained as one group, ask participants to share their takeaways to wrap up the program.

Tips for Hybrid or Virtual Engagement:

- At the end of the program, utilize an interactive whiteboard program (like Padlet) to encourage participation among all virtual participants. Possible prompts include:
 - » Share something another participant said that stuck with you.
 - » What questions do you have about the film or topics explored by the film?
- Use an online polling resource (like Mentimeter) to gauge participant's feelings, opinions, and knowledge levels in real-time.

In-Person Format: Film Viewing & Group Discussion

1. Distribute the Movie Guide and Exploring the Topics of Arab Citizens and Jewish-Arab Relations in Israel to students.
2. Screen the film to your group, briefly reviewing the background information before the film starts, and reminding participants of the content warnings.
3. After the film, take a short break before gathering as a group for a discussion.
4. Remind the group of guidelines constructive conversations (see below).
5. Ask the first question in the Movie Guide to the full group to begin generating ideas.
6. If size allows, split students into small groups to continue the discussion using the Movie Guide's discussion questions. Each group should designate a "recorder" to take notes and a "reporter" to summarize the recorder's notes after small groups.
7. Conclusion: If participants were split into small groups, have each "reporter" briefly summarize what their group talked about. If you remained as one group, ask participants to share their takeaways to wrap up the program.

Suggested Guidelines for Constructive Conversations

1. Our purpose today is to explore more a facet of Israeli society that may be less familiar to us and to learn from and with each other. This is a discussion, not a debate.
2. This film presented one snapshot relating to Arab citizens of Israel. As we saw in the film, Arab society is diverse and this isn't representative of all stories and experiences.
3. Listening doesn't necessarily mean agreeing. Have an open mind to ideas that may be less familiar or comfortable. Consider how you might experience the film and this discussion differently if you had different identities (Palestinian, Israeli, gender etc.)
4. Remember to make space for different voices in your conversation.

Note for facilitators: It's okay not to have all the answers! Don't try to make something up if you don't know. Instead, work with learners to find out more together.

Work With Us

The Task Force on Arab Citizens of Israel was created by a coalition of major American Jewish organizations to serve as a non-partisan educational resource on Arab citizens and Jewish-Arab relations in Israel. We would be happy to plan a more-depth in program with you and bring leading speakers on Arab society in Israel to your programs.
